TIME TO TREAT SHEEP FOR INTERNAL PARASITES

November is the signal for sheepmen to treat their flocks for internal parasites.

George A. Allen, Jr. sheep specialist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, says the November treatment is one of four recommended treatments, planned to strike at the best time for effective control.

The November treatment should be given after heavy frost or freezes, but not closer than one month before lambing time. This is the treatment that cleans out the parasites for the fall-winter season and starts the flock into the season in good shape insuring a healthier flock and stronger lambs.

Phenothiazine is the main material to use. At least one of the four yearly treatments should be with phenothiazine, containing lead arsenate or bluestone and nicotine. If you have already used one of the supplementary materials, use straight phenothiazine now.

If the ewes are bred to lamb early, separate the ram from the flock. It's a good idea to take ram out now and keep him out of the flock until next year's breeding season. Ewes that have not settled by now are late lambers and probably should be culled out of the flock.

FACE FLIES INVADING HOMES IN VIRGINIA

Face flies, a troublesome pest of livestock in the summer months, are beginning now to invade homes in Virginia, reports Wallace A. Tarpley, assistant entomologist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Like humans, the flies know that winter is nigh, and they're looking for a warm place to hibernate. They usually seek such places, as attics and barns. They are similar to the cluster fly, and can become a real nuisance. Use household sprays and the trusty fly swatter to get rid of them.

Another less bothersome insect now moving into homes is the boxelder bug. More and more of them will move inside as boxelder trees drop their leaves. Although the boxelder bug does not damage anything in the home, no one particularly wants them around. You can control them by picking them up in the vacuum cleaner or again using the fly swatter.

Homeowners can also expect wasps and millipedes as seasonal visitors in the home, Tarpley says.

Lucky Clover 4-H Club

The monthly meeting of the Lucky Clover 4-H Club was held Thursday, Oct. 19, at the home of Frances and David Reeves. The meeting was called to order by Pat Covington. The pledges were said, and Frances Reeve gave a demonstration on pressing. The club voted to have Safety as a club project.

The following officers were elected for the 1962 year:
President, Frances Reeve
Vice-pres., Gary Jamerson
Secretary and treasurer, Beth Massey
Song leaders: Bill Dudley, Pat Covington.
Recreation committee: Charles Jamerson, Susan Williams.
